Dear [redacted]

I have taken a long, hard look at the personal problem you brought to my attention and have discussed it at length with the medicos.

As much as I understand and sympathize with the compassionate problem you are faced with, I regret that I cannot see my way clear in the best interests of the Agency to intervene.

The medicos assure me that their problem in the case is probably a temporary one and they would be happy to review it at a later date when the party in question has had an opportunity to get better acclimated to the situation.

I know you understand my own situation in this regard.

Faithfully yours,
